RETT INSTALLMENTS WHEN DUE.

Treasurer Has No Right to Receive Overdue Payments, Says Judge Brown.

Judge Brown, of the Circuit Court, rendered a decision yesterday against the city in the suit of Alfred Fleischman to enjoin the county treasurer from receiving payment on improvement assessments after the first payment has been defaulted. The city demurred to the complaint and is overruled by the court. In commenting upon the mer its of the complaint the court says:

"It seems to me that the Legislature rec ognized the fact that it would be a hardship on citizens if they were compelled to pay all of their assessments at once, and, herefore, the Barrett law was created for the purpose of giving the property owner a period of ten years in which to pay off the provement lien on his property in regular installments; provided, however, that the bondholder should have a lien on all of the property affected.
"It was certainly the intention of the Legislature, after granting the privilege, to also make the bond marketable. It was the evident purpose to protect the bondholder in the same degree as the property owner, and at the same time make the bonds an acceptable medium of compensation to the contractor, so that the work of publi improvements should not be retarded or ntention of the Legislature to give the bondholders the right to proceed by foreclosure suits against property owners in cases where one payment was defaulted and ask bond. Now, if the bondholders have this right, the act of the treasurer in receiving these assessments after they become due nullifies that right. In the case cited de-fault has been made, and the treasurer so the bondholder has the right to foreclose the lien at once.'

A NEW EEL RIVER CASE.

Proper Service This Time.

The decision in the Eel River railroad case has been received with considerable disappointment at Logansport, where the suit matter now rests exactly where it was when Supreme Court has pointed out a legal way of obtaining service on home corporations that have no agent or officer within the State. Ex-Judge Winfield, of Logansport, who was one of the attorneys in the case, is quoted in the Logansport Pharos

Indiana corporation exclusively, but there is not an officer or an agent of the road in Indiana. The way we proceeded was to serve a summons on the secretary and treasurer of the company, who resides in Boston. The question of service did not come up until too late to remedy it without dismissing the case. I think the decision of the upper court is correct, but I was in hopes it would overlook this matter of service and decide the case on its merits. We shall file a new suit and proceed to get proper service on the Eel River Railway Company in the way the Supreme Court suggests will be a legal and binding service. So far as I know this will be done at once and in due time we shall obtain an opinion upon the real merits of the case.'

HOLDS HIS DEBT GOOD.

Claims the Decedent Provided in Her Will for It.

A new and somewhat novel proposition of law arose yesterday in the Circuit Court in the suit of G. S. Pittman against the estate of Mary B. Coffin. The claim amounted to $30, and was for groceries purchased by the decedent in 1887. The claimants admitted that the account had been "outlawed," but held that the clause of the decedent's will providing that "all of her just debts should be paid" made the claim good. A similar question has been decided in the English courts, and the reports show that the supreme courts of some of our States have passed on it. Judge Brown says the question is a new one in Indiana.

COMPROMISE WITH GRACE PATTON Michael H. Spades Paid Her $1,000, It

Is Stated. The $10,000 damage suit of Grace Frances Patton against Michael H. Spades for betrayal has been compromised. The girl, it understood, received $1,000. A day or two ago the suit of Belle Tilghman, the girl's nother, was dismissed from the Superior Mrs. Tilghman brought an action against Spades for $10,000 on account of her daughter's alleged wrongs. It is said that mother and daughter received between $1,500 and $2,000 in the way of a compromise. The suit of Grace Patton was tried in the Superior Court, but the jury disagreed and the case was afterward venued to Hancock county. Another Coatsville Suit. Attorneys McCullough and Spaan, representing Luella Sheeks, of Frankfort, yesterday brought suit in the Marion Superior Court against the Terre Haute & Indianapolis rallway for damages on account of the Coatsville wreck, which happened a year ago. The complaint asks for $50,000 damages. This is the secon neavy suit against the company in which the plaintiffs were injured at Coatsville. The first suit was brought by Mrs. Zelda Seguin-Wallace last fall. The plaintiff in the present suit boarded the ill-fated train at Greencastle to come to Indianapolis, Jan. 28, 1895. She alleges that the rails of the track at the point where the accident happened were too light; that speed of the train was great and that the engine was too heavy for the rack. The plaintiff further complains that the switch was improperly constructed. She ease at the base of the brain, that her right leg is paralyzed and nervous prostration has resulted from the shock. She avers that her age is twenty-four and says she believes that her life will be shortened as a result of the accident.

FURTHER EVIDENCE IN THE ALON-ZO ROOKER MURDER TRIAL.

Some Discrepancy in the Testimony of James Parker-Mother's Love for Children.

There was some argument over the testimony of James Parker in the Rooker case yesterday morning. Friday evening the witness testified that Emma Pees exclaimed: "My God, he's cutting us to pieces," as she ran from the Rhode Island-street house. Yesterday morning the attorneys for the defense succeeded in getting in a part of the coroner's report. It was shown that notified not to receive payments. I think that | Parker, before the coroner, had said Mrs. Pees uttered the exclamation while across the street. The testimony of the witness differed in one or two other minor points. Mrs. Katharine Darrow, matron of the In-Attorneys for the State Will Get dianapolis Orphans' Home, testified yesterday morning. The witness said that in 1893 Maggie Rooker brought two of her children to the home. She appeared to think a great deal of the children and often visited them, originated. About half way to the hospita Mrs. Rooker sank down on her knees with the cry: "Lord, have mercy." Witness went after a stretcher, and when he returned Mrs. Rooker could not speak. She died after being placed on the stretcher. At the request of the attorneys Judge McCray adjourned court at noon. The trial will be resumed Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The State expects to finish its

City Administration Helping Along the Old-Time "Chills" Weather.

"This reminds me of the good old days," said a citizen with a patriarchal beard as he stood on the west steps of the courthouse yesterday afternoon and gazed at the dismal picture of the streets below. "What days?" asked his companion.

"The old days of chills and quinine-the days before we knew what asphalt was or felt the need of sewers. Before we had a street cleaning department."

"How is that?" asked the companion, who seemingly refused to trust to his imagination to interpret the meaning of the citizen with the patriarchal beard.

"Everything reminds me of the old days," replied the old citizen. "This weather seems more like the old article than any I have seen for years. It is like it used to be when the town was surrounded by swamps. The atmosphere is heavy, cold and creepy. Look at those streets. They are as bad an anything we had when there was nothing better than mud roads. Mud, slush and slop. We didn't have the way of cleaning streets in those days as we have now

Well, I guess I'll get some quinine." The two men started off together, crossthem deep in the slush. They looked sick and disgusted with the present order of things, as did nine of every ten people seen on the streets yesterday. Indianapoli streets have not been in such a deplorable condition for seven or eight years as they were yesterday, and as they probably will be to-day and to-morrow and for many days to come. It is recalled that last year and the year before men were put to work on the street crossings and pedestrians were insured safe passage across streets. Several of the down-town streets were cleaned and flushed. But that time seems passed. Street Commissioner Herpeck has had many men at work on Pogue's run, streets and other things. The street cleaning contractors have done nothing and the

No citizen would have pointed to Washington street yesterday with any degree of pride. A public spirited citizen would have probably hurried a stranger through the street in a closed carriage or taken him up alleys and explained that the snow and ice in the latter had not been cleane up because of the desire to first get the streets in order. Washington street was covered from curb to curb with one or two or three or five inches of muddy, sloppy slush, all of which could have been washe off with a line of hose attached to one Mr. Davis's fire plugs. The depth of the slush depended upon the distance it lay from the curb. A man dared not cross street except at the crossings, and had a woman attempted to cross a rescue party would have had to be sent after her. The but vehicles have carried slush over them and they were muddy. As was Washington street, so were the other streets of the city, except that a majority of the other streets have never enjoyed any crossing cleaning. The temperature yesterday was between thawing and freezing, as if the mercury was awaiting bids for an upward or downward movement. The sun was concealed behind cheerless clouds, so the conditions underfoot and overhead were such as to make the average individual dissatisfied with the world in general and Democracy

Samuel Paugh's Condition Worse. Samuel Paugh, one of the victims of the Deloss-street tragedy, was reported as being in a bad condition yesterday and considerable doubts were felt by the hospital physicians as to his recovery. He took a change for the worse during the day. His brother, who lives in Acton, has been with him a good deal of the time since the sho ing. Mrs. Molly Murphy is improving considerably and the physicians now think she has a good chance to recover.

A GAIN IN BUILDINGS

PERMITS FOR 1895 SHOW A VALUE INCREASE OF OVER $750,000.

During the Year 991 Residences, Five Churches and Four Schoolhouses Constructed.

Building Inspector Bunting filed the annual report of the department with the Board of Safety yesterday. The report is chiefly that of Mr. Pendergast, for Mr. Bunting has filled the office but a few months. During the year 2,357 building permits were issued, the sworn value of which is $2,868,695.76. This represents the amount of building done in Indianapolis during the last year. The department made 4,256 inspections and forty-two condemnations Fifty-three business blocks and seventeen factories were erected during the year. During the year 991 residences were built, of which 396 were two-story and 595 one story. Five churches and four school houses were constructed. The comparative valuations of buildings for 1894 and 1895 show an increase of building in the year just closed over the preceding year. In 1894 2,022 licenses for buildings were issued, while in 1895 there were 2,357 licenses. The total valuation of buildings in 1894 was $2,107,115.40, while in 1895 it was $2,868,695.76. Following is the sworn valuation of licenses for each month of the two years: $51,992.00 anuary February April May June July 295,748.00 August September October 105,614.00 November December

Dr. John Komler Outlines His Idea of the Project. The meeting of the Second Presbyterian Church, January 22, in the interest of a state hospital will be presided over by Governor Matthews. Dr. John Komler, who has the project under way, outlines the plans in the following:

"Before I become actively engaged in meding for its object the care of the sick poor. have spoken to me of the need of a firsthospital where people that have falen the victims of disease and are without means to employ a physician, may be sent. Often the local physician is overworked and is unable to give the needed attention to such persons. Some one may say that such unfortunates can be sent to the County Alms House, Orphans' Home, Homes for the Aged, etc., throughout the State. These institutions are not provided with the means necessary to combat a woeful enemy. Would you and I wish to be taken to any of these institutions if we were taken ill with any of the contagious and infectious diseases, or any disease requirement to bed for any length of time? For example, typhoid fever. The mode of treatment by which the largest number of lives is saved as shown by statistics, cannot well be carried out in any private family, much less in any of the institutions I have mentioned. Persons requiring operative treatment do not have the same chances for recovery at home as are afforded in a first-class hospital with an especially trained corps nurses, where every movement is directed towards the destruction of any of the disease producing organisms. Also persons afflicted with disease of the nervous system, are often unjustly sent to the asylums for the insane. These institutions are crowded to such an extent that superintendents, if they would, cannot give individual attention to the patients, nor can the patients be classed in such a manner as not to have a baneful influence upon one another. The cause of the mental aberration should always be ascertained before passing sen-Why commit to an asylum a patient whose disturbance of equilibrium is caused upon the brain? Or the cause may be in some organ remote from the brain affecting it by reflex action, as in abdominal tumors, lacerations, and displaced pelvic organs. Locate the cause, remove if possible by medication. If this fails try a surgical means. Should the cause be due to cerebral congestion or cerebral anaemia, the appro priate medication, hygienic and moral treatment should be given, and patient and family be saved from the stgma attached to confinement in an insane asylum "By way of suggestion, it is estimated that from 50 to 60 per cent. of the inmates in asylums belong to the class which known as the 'harmless insane.' It would e well worth the while to try what is known as the 'boarding out' system, by means of which the utmost liberty of action is given, no bolts, no bars. The reports of cures where this system is in vo are remarkable. They are given us by the authorities of Belgium and Scotland, and in our own country, by those of Massachusetts. reserved only for three classes-those that have committed some act dangerous to themselves, or to others, or to property; wise that they have dangerous tendencies or uncontrollable propensities toward crime: uncontrollable propensities toward crime; and those that wander about and are exposed to want of food or shelter or to ac-cident. This is a matter that should receive he greatest consideration from every citi-

other chance by having them examined by a special board, consisting of specialists, and, if in their judgment, the cases could be cured by a careful and well-regulated course of treatment without consigning them to an insane asylum, such should be done. The upper story should be divided into private rooms, to which any citizen may be admitted by paying the required amount. "The advantages of such a hospital are many. Namely, its liberal government, the desirable rooms, its large wards, good hygiene, all especially adapted for the purpose of combatting disease. The system of nursing in connection, with the pyhsician in whom the patient has the greatest amount of confidence, is an important factor that will materially aid the individual n conquering the disease and being (if within the power of medical science and it be the will of God), rapidly restored to health. For health is essential to make resistance to temptation a normal sequence. and to render the duties which we are called upon to discharge of comparative ease. "Such a hospital should have an amphitheater with a seating capacity of 400, where course in clinical medicine and surgery could be given by the best members of the profession, thus affording post graduate work at a small expense, of say $10, for a course ticket of six months. Such instruction is much needed, owing to the present laws governing the practice of medicine. There should be a traing school for nurses, and a thorough course of instruction in massage and electricity, such as is given in private sanatoriums, only in the reach of the rich, can be extended to the poor, and therefore keeping many from being sent to an insane asylum. from a life of invalidism and a premature grave. A drug room must be in the hospital. The entire hospital can be furnished free of charge to the management. The private rooms will furnished in memory of certain persons, am sure the ladies of the various churche will furnish the wards. The young peo will interest themselves on behalf of the it costs to make them. children's department, the railroad comwill surely do something. Muchican be done by uniting the various forces that can be brought together. In union is strength. Every life saved means an additional strength to our flag. Disease should be taken in charge when it first makes its appearance, and not after it has run its course. A large number of the inmates in the orphans' home, alms house and penitentiary are there in consequence of some disease existing in the family. The good people of this city and State are doing much in support of various institutions, but they are not working in a way that their labor will yield the best results. No institution that has for its object the promotion of social good will give its best results if in the hands of city or State politics. They should be governed by the State Board of Char-
